THE SUPREME JUDGESHIP.

Qualities that are Required for that Place—Judge Gantt's name
Suggested.

Correspondence to the St. Louis Republic.

The chief interest of the people of Missouri in this year's election will centre in the Supreme Judgeship. The crowded condition of the docket is a serious thing. It, therefore, behooves the party to see to it that it selects a judge this time fully equipped for the work—one who by education and practice, is prepared for arduous labor, and who will have all the vigor of strong manhood both intellectually and physically. Only such men should be selected for the important position.

Without disparaging any of the eminent gentlemen named for the place, Henry county will present to the convention, which will meet in St. Joseph on the 11th day of June the name of Judge James B. Gantt of Clinton.

Judge Gantt is in the prime of his life being 45 years of age. He was born in Putnam county, Georgia, and received a liberal education in the private schools and academies of that state, until the war closed the schools. He went into the confederate army and served therein until disabled by a shot in the knee, in the fall of 1864. As soon as the war was over he began the study of his profession under Col. L. N. Whittle of Macon, Ga. He went to the University of Virginia and graduated in the law department of that institution, in 1868, and came to Missouri in the fall of the same year. From that time to the present he has devoted himself to his profession. He soon took high rank in this section.

In 1875 he became a member of the law firm of Philips & Vest at Sedalia and well sustained the high prestige of that noted firm. In 1877 he returned to Clinton and in 1880 was elected judge of this circuit court which position he held for six years, and would have been re-elected without opposition, but for the fact that he declined to be a candidate. No judge in the state bore himself better during all this time. His gentlemanly bearing, his high sense of justice, his incorruptible integrity so commended him to this people that his name is a household word throughout this circuit. At the close of his term he returned to a large and lucrative practice. His legal service is sought in all the surrounding counties.

In all that constitutes a gentleman, a lawyer and a judge, he is the peer of any named for the Supreme judgeship. He is a clean man, a lawyer of quick perception and possessed of a well-trained legal mind.

He will go to the convention with the great counties of the southwest at his back; a section rich in men of brain and inexhaustible resources full of life, and democrats to the core.

Judge Gantt was the last president of the Bar Association of the state, and numbers among his friends and supporters many of the oldest lawyers of the state.

He has the commendable ambition to serve his state on the bench. If the democracy desires to keep the ermine unstained; if they mean that justice shall not be delayed or denied; if they want a democrat, whose services have always been at the command of his party, then no mistake will be made in nominating Judge Gantt at St. Joseph.

Gen. Butler Tells all he Knows About The Farmers.

Boston, Mass., May 1.—Gen. Butler made a speech at the Butler Club dinner to-day. The occasion was the anniversary of the occupation of New Orleans by the Union troops and it was expected that the old war horse would recall some of the incidents connected with that event but instead, he devoted his time to a consideration of the more peaceful pursuits of farming. He presented a startling financial array of facts regarding the hopeless condition of the farmers for the consideration of congressmen and others who propose to make political capital out of the farmers. The meeting was non-political. Republicans and Democrats alike paid their respects to Gen. Butler. Gov. Brackett and other republicans and Judge and other leading democrats sat at the same table.
